

June 2, 1960

TOPICS FOR CONVERSATION:

- I. Use of Intelligence Product in policy-making and decision-making process.

Is the real depth and breadth of our intelligence knowledge brought to bear at the right place and with the right weight in the policy process?

- II. Organization of the U. S. Intelligence Community.
Possible lines of improvement.

More centralization?

Duplication?

Departmental versus national intelligence?

- III. Intelligence Provisions of the National Security Act of 1947.

How has it worked?

Any statutory changes?

- IV. Is the machinery for weighing intelligence advantages against risks adequate?

Is there sufficient provision for review by non-intelligence people of intelligence activities?

- V. Comments on problem of official acknowledgment of intelligence gathering activities.

Historical development of this.

Comparison with British practice.

- VI. Comments on problem of coordination of policy and publicity statements following exposure of a sensitive intelligence activity.
